Over ten million single mothers in the United States struggle through pain and daily difficulties to make a satisfactory life for themselves and their children. These mothers often feel alone and abandoned by our culture and, all too often, our churches. They come to their situations in various ways, but it is extremely rare that a child is conceived without a father. Yet mothers are often left to care for and raise the child/ren alone. Single mothers deserve inspiration and encouragement. Churches and community organizations often do not seem to know how to assist or offer support for the single mothers in their midst. Single moms of all economic groups need the support of others whether in communities, the workplace, and certainly in our churches. Yet, churches often do not know how to minister to the single mothers in their congregations. Larry Burkhardt states it well: “The unfortunate truth is that most Christians have been blinded to the needs of single parents. They somehow think that the government provides all their needs. Not so. Single parents don’t need welfare; they need friends who care.”

Encouraging Single Moms to Grow Their Strengths provides detailed guidelines to show you care. Whether you are the director of a singles group, a member of a women’s organization, or an individual with a passion for single moms, you will find this guidebook helpful.

The Encouraging Single Moms to Grow Their Strengths guidebook is available on www.smoreforwomen.org for $20. Gail is available to facilitate your first reTREAT. Contact her at singlemoms@smoreforwomen.org

Presented By

Gail Cawley Showalter

Sunday afternoons in October

5:00-6:00 P. M.

Calder Baptist Church

1005 N. Eleventh Street

Beaumont, TX 77702

All children may be created equal, but they are definitely not created the same.

Just as all children are different, so are their parents. Gail's experience as a single mother provided many examples of how each child is unique. Once the parent accepts and applies personality knowledge of their own personality, they can better parent their children.

This presentation includes stories, illustrations, and practical information that can be applied as soon as you walk in the door.
